

The Glenleighden School Promotional Activities Permission

Parents/guardians of enrolled students are requested to give permission for their child to be included in promotional materials on the understanding that care is taken that the material is not used in any unsuitable way, and that it may not be used by any third party without further permission being sought.

The Association for Childhood Language and Related Disorders (CHI.L.D.), being the parent body of The Glenleighden School, from time to time undertakes activities, which involve the publication of limited information about students at the school. There are two important reasons for these activities: (a) to promote the School, in order to raise its profile in the community and attract funds for its continued operation: and (b) to pursue the broader aims of the Association which include providing assistance to, and advocacy for children with language and related learning disorders and their families.

Promotional materials may take the form of photographs, electronic recordings or written accounts. The information published by the school about students in promotional materials is anonymous unless permission has been given to include a student's name. With permission, first names, or alternatively, assumed names may be used. In other cases, care is taken that students are not identified.

The Association reserves the right, as a condition of enrolment, to use photographs, electronic recordings and case records relating to the student for the purpose of clinical evaluation and professional training and communication within Glenleighden School and between Glenleighden School and other professional agencies.
